LIFE BOATS OF FIVE SHIPS TO DIXIE'S SUCCOR

Passengers May Be Taken Off Grounded Liner This Eve

BULLETIN
Miami, Fla., Sept. 4.—(AP)—A Pan American Airways pilot who flew over the grounded Morgan liner Dixie radioed at 2:45 P. M. today that the work of removing passengers had begun.

Four of nine steamers hove to in the vicinity were taking off passengers. Pilot Roy Keeler, flying an amphibian ship, reported.

Rough seas obviously were hampering the work, he said.

BULLETIN
Miami, Fla., Sept. 4.—(AP)—Treachorous, squally weather whipping the rock-studded waters off French Reef continued this afternoon to balk the rescue of 384 persons aboard the battered and stranded liner Dixie.

On several rescue ships standing by the Dixie, life boats hung above the water, and their crews stood ready at their stations prepared to launch them.

They could not. The storm moderated steadily, but squalls arose abruptly and the long vigil continued.

Two United Fruit line boats which have stood by the leaking and pounded coastal liner, aground since early Tuesday morning, were ordered by offices in New York to proceed on their voyages, their

BALDWIN ON DIXIE
Mr. and Mrs. Edward "Sonny" Baldwin are passengers on the Morgan liner Dixie which ran aground on French reef off the eastern coast of Florida with passengers and crew totaling 372 aboard. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin left New Orleans aboard the Dixie, to sail to New York City and then come to Dixon for a visit with his mother, Mrs. H. A. Brooks. The latter was being informed of the progress made toward removing the passengers from the Dixie through The Associated Press dispatches at The Telegraph office today.

places to be taken by other vessels of the same company with better accommodations for passengers of the Dixie.

The captain of the Platano, which since yesterday lay close to the stranded boat, replied that he was proceeding full speed toward New York.

Banana Boat Released

Captain E. W. Sundstrom of the Dixie had released him, he wirelessly, because of the perishable cargo of bananas the Platano carried, and also because of the large number of ships in the immediate vicinity.

Captain Sundstrom messaged that water which had risen to a depth of ten feet in two of the Dixie's holds had been pumped to a level two feet lower.

"It is the general feeling that there is no need for apprehension," W. H. Depperman, passenger on the Platano, said in a radio message.

"However, when the rescue does begin, expert handling will be required of all life boats to prevent persons going overboard to the sharks and barracudas with which the waters abound."

Depperman reported that a small launch alongside the bow of the Dixie could be seen from the Platano.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 4.—Life boats were swung over the sides of rescue ships today, ready to be dispatched to the aid of the stranded liner Dixie which pounded on French Reef with 372 persons aboard her.

The tension among crews of the rescue ships reached high pitch as the climax to their long vigil approached.

The report that the life boats were prepared for launching came in a wireless message from W. H. Depperman, a passenger on the Platano, United Fruit liner which lay closest to the stranded vessel.

$12 Hog Returns

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The twelve dollar hog returned to the livestock market today after a two weeks' absence on the impetus of an advance in fresh pork prices.

Live hogs rose 10 to 20 cents to a top of $12.10, which was only a dime below the six-year peak price for hogs established the middle of August. Scarcity of supplies, along with an improved demand in the wholesale pork trade, imparted strength to the live market.

Wholesale fresh pork prices here were strong to 50 cents per hundredweight higher, the top for choice light loins returning to 25 1-2 cents per pound, which was still 4 1-2 cents below the peak of 30 cents established three weeks ago.

Normally retail pork prices fluctuate in sympathy with the wholesale trade.

Hunt Elderly Negro Charged With Attack on 12-Year-Old Girl

Creedmoor, N. C., Sept. 4.—(AP)—Granville county officers and scores of citizens, aided by bloodhounds, scoured swamplands seven miles south of here early today in search of John Kingham, elderly Negro charged with attacking the 12-year-old daughter of Bryant Peed.

Officers scouted reports of a possible lynching which caused Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus at Raleigh, 24 miles away, to order a company of state highway patrolmen to the scene.

Feeling was admittedly running high, but police said the number of deputies, soon to be augmented by the patrolmen, was more than sufficient to insure against any violence.

Use of South Drive at Lowell Park for Leaving Prohibited

The Dixon park board has received numerous complaints of drivers in Lowell park using the south drive in leaving the park. The practice was said to be carried on by local residents who are aware of the danger of using the one way drive in leaving the park and orders have been issued to arrest all offenders. The first victim under the new order, a Dixon young woman, was arrested and fined last week for violating the order. The members of the park district have taken this precaution to prevent any serious accidents on this particular road which is intended only to be used by traffic entering the park.

Body of Former Dix-onite is Buried Here

The body of Patrick Coffey, former Dix-onite, who died at his home in Rockford Sunday, was brought to Dixon Tuesday morning, following services in Rockford, and laid to rest in Oakwood cemetery. The deceased, who was about 70 years of age and who left Dixon about 35 years ago, is survived by his widow and three brothers, Hugh of Dubuque, Ia., Francis of Mayville, Wis., and Thomas of Dixon.

CONSUL A SUICIDE

Washington, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The Dollar Steamship Company informed the State Department today that George C. Hanson, consul general at Salonika, Greece, had died on board the steamship President Polk on September 2 from a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Hanson was born in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1883, and graduated from Cornell University in 1908.

Mrs. Emma Beier Bennett Seeks Cancellation of Trust Agreement She Executed in Favor Geo. Beier

Mrs. Emma Beier Bennett of this city yesterday afternoon filed an action in chancery in the circuit court against Earl, Arthur, George H., Paul R., Lois, Joan, Robert, William, John and Beverly Beier. The petition sets forth that under a trust agreement executed June 18, 1930, the plaintiff transferred certain properties held by her to George H. Beier. Previous to the execution of the agreement, she charges, the plaintiff transacted her business affairs irrationally and her incapacity was taken advantage of by certain persons whereby a portion of the property of the plaintiff was transferred and forever lost to her.

The petition further alleges that

STANDARD OIL'S CANCELLATION OF OIL GRANT TOLD

Withdrawal from Ethiopian Contract is Announced Last Eve

BULLETIN
Addis Ababa, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Members of the Ethiopian government appeared nonplussed today when informed that the Standard Vacuum Oil Company had withdrawn from its Ethiopian concessions on representations by the State Department of the United States. They declined immediate comment.

Observers here assumed that the United States government wished to avoid being drawn into the already acutely delicate political situation which has arisen between this nation and Italy and that Washington wished to avoid compromising the American relationship with Italy.

Emperor Haile Selassie was not immediately informed of the cancellation.

Washington, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The Standard Vacuum Oil Company's cancellation of a gigantic Ethiopian oil concession was believed today to have erased all chance of United States entanglement in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Secretary Hull's diplomatic maneuver in persuading the oil firm to drop its plans for African exploitation was credited by informed observers with having clarified issues in the controversy between Italy and the Abyssinian empire. These observers also saw the move as a bold stroke destined to aid Great Britain and other European nations in their attempts to calm the troubled East African scene.

At Hyde Park, N. Y., President Roosevelt was said to be "delighted" at the turn of events "because he regarded the contract as upsetting to peace negotiations." The League of Nations met in a special which imperiled British peace effort to avert war.

One More Problem

The question of another American oil and mineral concession remained to be settled. This is held by Leo Y. Chertok, New York broker, who said he received the concession as security for a loan of $1,000,000 to be raised by Oct. 17.

The Standard Vacuum issue was settled after George S. Walden, chairman, and H. Dundas, vice president, called at the state department for advice. They conferred with Wallace Murray, chief of the Near Eastern division, and

ROCKFORD'S GAS BEFORE STATE'S UTILITIES BODY

Commission Seeks to Reconcile Widely Varied Figures

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Informal discussions of the Rockford gas rate continued today before the Illinois Commerce Commission, with the Central Illinois Electric & Gas Co. taking exception to figures presented by Rockford city officials.

A financial statement prepared by the city and submitted to the commission by Mayor C. H. Bloom, Raymond Orput, City Engineer and Charles S. Thomas, Corporation Counsel, drew in rebuttal a statement from Donald S. McClure, president of the utility.

Valuation of the company's property ranged from $3,774,000 in the city's statement to $5,368,000 in that of the utility. The latter figure, McClure said, represented what he termed the company's "minimum worth as of July 30, 1934."

A set of preliminary figures prepared for the commission by J. W. Lansley, its gas engineer, based earnings, charges and other items on a cost of $4,192,000—the purchase price.

Cites Freeport Service

Another bone of contention was that the amount chargeable to Freeport, Ill., gas users, served by the Central Illinois through a high pressure main from the Rockford plant. Rockford city officials contended that their city "carried the load" for Freeport, and that this latter service should not be considered in fixing a Rockford price.

Vidal said Post discussed with Eugene Vidal, Alaskan pilot who flew the bodies of the famed comedian and flier back to the United States, the seeming nose-heaviness and his suspicion that the pontoons were responsible.

Post said that because of this condition Rogers always sat far back in the plane on takeoffs and all luggage was kept aft to balance the ship.

Envisioning the accident from information gathered from Crosson, Eskimos who saw the crash and others, Vidal said:

"It is reasonable to believe that Post was banking the plane to the right while still in a slight climb. * * * The combination of the plane in a banking turn, with still low flying speed immediately following the takeoff and climb, the motor failure and the airplane's nose-heaviness, could result in such a stall."

The motor failure he attributed to freezing of moisture that condensed from the damp atmosphere or from spray collected on the takeoff. Because the motor was buried in the waters of the lagoon, Vidal said, a definite check of this theory was impossible.

Instead of having fallen only 50 feet, as reported by natives, Vidal said the ship probably stalled at around 200 feet, which was the "ceiling" reported for that area.

Dement Schuler Flew to Cleveland Races

Dement Schuler spent the weekend and Labor Day in Cleveland, Ohio, witnessing the annual air races at which were gathered over 800 commercial and military airplanes.

On the return trip Mr. Schuler flew to Chicago from Cleveland with A. L. Shushan of New Orleans as his pilot. The flight was completed in one hour and fifty minutes.

At the races were airplanes of all types and descriptions. The army and navy were both represented at the races and hundreds of commercial planes flocked from all sections of the nation to the huge 1,600-acre airport field at Cleveland where the races were held.

Mrs. LeRoy Lightner Died in California

Word received by relatives in Dixon late Sunday, announced the passing of Mrs. LeRoy L. Lightner, formerly of this city, at her home in Glendale, Calif., at noon Saturday. Her husband was a former member of the police department of this city and for a time was employed as engineer at the Dixon Water Co. plant. Mrs. Lightner before her marriage was Miss Lucille Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of LaSalle, now of Glendale, Calif., who with her husband and two daughters survive.

During a severe flood in Glendale, a suburb of Los Angeles, more than a year ago, Mrs. Lightner was swept some distance before the surging water, receiving injuries from which she never recovered and which eventually resulted in her death.

After Five Years

Centralia, Ill., Sept. 4.—(AP)—With the finding of positively identified jewelry, a wallet, bits of hunting shirt, gold filled teeth and a belt buckle bearing the initial "R." on August 27, near Yellow Pine, Idaho, a five year search for R. W. "Wink" Robertson of Centralia, who became lost while on a hunting expedition October 6, 1930, has come to an end.

The hunter's remains were found by a sheep herder tending his flock near Cascade, Idaho, word received here disclosed.

NOSE-HEAVINESS OF POST'S SHIP CAUSE OF FALL?

Air Experts' Envisioning of Fatal Crash Based on Evidence

Washington, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Air experts figured today that failure of its motor before it had gained sufficient flying speed to offset a nose-heaviness may have sent the plane of Will Rogers and Wiley Post on its death dive into an Alaskan lagoon.

The preliminary report of Eugene Vidal, air commerce director, disclosed the probable poor balance in the ship because of the substitution of pontoons for the regular landing gear at Seattle.

Vidal said Post discussed with Eugene Vidal, Alaskan pilot who flew the bodies of the famed comedian and flier back to the United States, the seeming nose-heaviness and his suspicion that the pontoons were responsible.

Post said that because of this condition Rogers always sat far back in the plane on takeoffs and all luggage was kept aft to balance the ship.

GREAT BRITAIN BOWS TO ITALY IN LEAGUE MEET

Placating Gesture Made in Discussion of Ethiopia Today

Geneva, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Italy bluntly warned the League of Nations today that she could no longer discuss her controversy with Ethiopia "at the league on a footing of equality with Ethiopia."

This declaration, made by Baron Ponce Alais, the league representative of Premier Mussolini, followed a placating gesture by Anthony Eden, British cabinet minister. Eden told the assembled council of the league that there could be no question of any political or economic conflict between Great Britain and Italy.

"Italy," declared Alais, "refuses to recognize that the equality and privileges of league members should be given Ethiopia, which has not fulfilled her obligations. x x x

"Italy," declared Alais, "refuses to action so as to adopt all measures which may become necessary for the security of her colonies and for safeguarding her interests."

Eden told the council that conflict between Great Britain and Italy was impossible because the latter nation had promised to respect Great Britain's interests in Ethiopia "and Great Britain is sure these interests will be respected in the future."

Following Alais's declaration, the council session was suspended.

Dr. Ruiz Guinazu of Argentina, president of the council, announced that the Ethiopian delegation wished time to prepare a reply to Italy and said the time for the next meeting would be announced later.

Premier Laval of France pleaded for conciliation on the part of both Italy and Great Britain, declaring: "I am convinced the Italo-Ethiopian dispute can be settled by the League."

As the council members assembled Italy had filed a protest against Ethiopian membership in the league. (The Italian memorandum charged that Ethiopia by her conduct "placed herself openly outside the league and rendered herself unworthy of the confidence accorded her when she was admitted.")

Baron Alais declared that if the league's recently adopted definition of an aggressor had existed previously, Italy often in the past would have been justified under the league rules—in "resorting to war against Ethiopia."

The Italian told the representatives of the other nations that his government had submitted a memorandum, explaining the reason Italy believes Ethiopia has "systematically violated all treaty undertakings both toward Italy and the league."

He said that for the same reason, Italy was unable to accept the program presented during the conference with Great Britain and France in Paris last month.

Alais said that for 50 years Italy has pursued a policy of amity and collaboration with Ethiopia but that Ethiopia had resorted to brigandage and violence.

New WPA Project to Accomplish Sewage Treatment Plant Here is Authorized by City Commission

Mayor William Slothower was empowered by resolution adopted at a special meeting of the city council last evening to proceed with filing an application for federal aid in financing the construction of a sewage treatment plant for Dixon, the council voting unanimously in favor of the action. All former procedure has been rescinded and the council starts with an entirely new project.

E. Roy Wells of the Wells Engineering Company of Geneva will come to Dixon tomorrow to confer with Mayor Slothower after which he will file Dixon's application for a 45 per cent federal grant in financing the improvement.

Stranger Alleged to Have Defrauded Polo Officer on Holiday

Police of this section of Illinois have been requested to be on the look-out for a stranger wearing large smoked sun glasses and a blue serge suit, who over the week end secured the sum of $15 in cash from Joe Powell, Polo night police officer, in exchange for a worthless check. The stranger appeared in Polo last week and for several days lived in a private home where he had secured a room. Over the week end he went to the Orient hotel, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Powell, and reserved a room. In payment he gave a check in the sum of $17.50 to Powell, who gave him $15 in cash. The following morning, it was discovered that the room had not been occupied and the stranger had suddenly left town.

In addition to honoring the worthless check, the officer was reported to have furnished this guest with a good blue serge coat, when the stranger complained that he had come to Polo on business quite suddenly, had neglected to bring a coat and was suffering from the cold spell.

Government, State, Red Cross Rush Relief Efforts

Miami, Fla., Sept. 4.—With rescuers estimating the death toll at between 400 and 500, part of the extent of devastation on the hurricane-swept Florida keys was learned today from survivors and from expeditions of mercy and aid.

All of the forces of the government were joined with the Red Cross in rushing supplies to the areas of death and wreckage and in evacuating the debris-littered keys.

The heaviest loss of life, rescuers reported, was on upper and lower Matecumbe Keys and in the fishing villages along Plantation Key and Key Largo.

Two of the three government camps on the Matecumbe Keys, where war veterans are engaged in building a highway down from the keys to Key West, were reported completely demolished.

A rescue party out of Miami, led by Jacq Combs, an undertaker assigned to organize identification of the dead, reported between 400 and 500 persons were killed in this area.

Crushed Under Hotel. Many of those who died on Matecumbe Key were crushed in the collapse of the Snake Creek hotel, which was being used as a hospital at the camp.

Among those was Dr. E. C. Main, medical director of the camp.

The word of Dr. Main's death was brought to the mainland by Dr. Lasser Alexander, a medical examiner at the camp who escaped death in the collapse of the hotel. Graphically, Dr. Alexander described the Monday night of horror:

"I was at Snake Creek hotel, which was used as a hospital. This collapsed about 10 P. M., with many persons under the ruins. There were about 40 patients in this building, about half of them women and children. Out of this number, there were only seven men and three or four of the women saved."

Walked Through Hole. "When the building toppled over, I was able to walk out through a hole in the wall into about three or four feet of water filled with floating timbers and debris. The wind was about 50 or 60 miles an hour and carried flying timbers that caused most of the casualties."

"When we found the water still rising, we made our way to the railroad track. We dug holes into the earth under the cross ties so we could protect our heads from the flying debris. This was the only way we could keep our brains from being crushed out. We stayed on the railroad track until 3 A. M. (Tuesday) as that was the only place above water. "At daybreak Tuesday, we found a tank car full of water which offered refuge."

Coffee was made for the ill and injured, Dr. Alexander said. In the afternoon, Buck Wright (one of the men at the camp, evidently) and several others who had row boats took Mr. Alexander and the other survivors across Snake creek, separating Matecumbe Key from Largo Key, one at a time. From there they were brought to Miami in rescue trucks.

SHARING WEALTH?

By Joseph Fort Newton
LITTLE while ago we had a song, "Brother, can you spare a dime?" But now we have changed it to a new version, "Brother you must share your wealth."

Shall we "share the wealth" as we are asked to do? Of course, but what is wealth? Henry Ford is right when he says that wealth does not consist of money alone, or chiefly; money only represents wealth.

Wealth is made up of many things—lands, plants, machines, work, wages, credit, production, distribution, good will; how can these things be shared? Or rather how can we help sharing them in the give and take of trade? Else industry would be stagnant, as it has been of late.

But that is not what the wealth-sharers want. They demand that wealth be divided up, shared and shared alike, in a grand distribution. If that was done today, it would have to be done over again tomorrow, as surely as suns rise and set, as the long experience of the race shows.

Even so, argue the sharers, it would prevent too great a concentration of power in the hands of a few, who use it for their own ends, and not for the common good; and therein lies the value of the idea.

Life is sharing. We did not share prosperity, and therefore we lost it. Nor can we ever recover it, much less keep it, unless we share it to a greater extent than we have been willing to do so far.

Just because we have been long on getting and short on sharing, life was thrown out of balance and we landed in a ditch. Unless we learn to live and let live give as well as take, we cannot get out.

Yes, life is sharing, not shearing. All education is sharing the wealth of insight, experience and understanding of life, stored up in the wisdom of the race—truth ready for each according to his capacity.

In the fellowship of religion men share the highest things—some even swap sins—learning together what none may know alone.

If only we could learn how little of the wealth of life consists in money, and how much in the things that money cannot buy!

To Wed King George's Third Son

Announcement from Buckingham Palace: "It is with great pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their dearly beloved son, the Duke of Gloucester, to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott (above), the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch and Queensberry, to which union the King has given his consent."

Child Remains As A Reproof to Many Lazy Voters

BY HELEN WELSHEIMER

There will be some empty desks when school opens in a little while. There will be disappointed eyes following the children who carry school books. There will be some tear-wet pillows, too, although children who work unhappy hours pasting labels on cans and operating machines in mills, can't take much time out for weeping.

In brief, Child Labor again has become a national hazard. For a while there was a prevalent belief that school days, sand boxes, and nine o'clock bedtime stories were land of the free. It was not built on solid grounds. It was erected on the NRA codes instead of upon the being universally accepted in the general ratification of the states by the Child Labor Amendment to the Constitution.

Whether or not the N. R. A. codes should have lived or died is wholly beyond this particular part of the issue. For a brief period children's rights were respected. Because of that, the public forgot that they were being granted on an impermanent basis.

No one, confronted with an individual child who toils in a factory day after day when he ought to be learning the alphabet or long division would approve. Every effort would be used to make that particular child happy. Yet, with the knowledge that a vast army of boys and girls are being deprived of proper preparation for strong, healthy citizenship, the states do nothing.

"When we vote we will see that children do not work," women remarked in the days before the eighteenth amendment.

"When we get the ballot, the nation will find better protection for its homes!"

The ballot was granted, aving received it, too many women are inclined to forget the need of using it. The false foundation on which children's privileges were based was deceiving. Now that it has collapsed there is surprise that we have the old, long-fought battle on our hands again.

In a nation in which strong men labor, it is evident that there is not walk weary streets searching for enough work to keep children busy too. In a land where men are beginning for odd tasks to do it's ironic that children should be taken from the classroom because they are needed in the factory and field and store.

It should not be necessary for any man or woman to come to a door selling needles and thread and shoe laces. There should be necessary tasks for everyone. That thing we know as well as we know that seed time follows harvest and every summer drifts to autumn.

We talk of a Utopia where work might be proportioned fairly. If we would protect and safeguard the interests of children automatically we would release many jobs for men. No sane person believes that it is fair for an employer to deprive a man of labor because a child will do it for a few cents less.

It is the heritage of every child to romp in sun-bright fields, to sail kites and spin tops and play jacks, and be "it" for lie-low-sheepie. Any country that deprives its children of the privileges of the formative years will suffer in the next generation of its citizenship. We, like other nations, have learned that this is true. If women want to work a renaissance, it could be done with ease and swiftness now.

Inattention to Spoken Word Is Very Bad Habit

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Molly, seventeen, goes to the telephone. Someone announces herself and Molly gets it like a shot. "Oh, Bill, I thought it was you. What are you doing?" "Just sittin' here. Talkin' to you."

"Huh?" says Molly. Bill repeats it. Then he says, "What are you doing?"

"Huh?" says Molly again. Bill says "What are you doing?" Molly says, "Oh nothing. Just reading."

Bill asks Molly what she was reading.

She says "Huh?" again and Bill tries hard to remember that Molly's curls are golden and her eyes very blue. After a few dozen "huh's" he is vaguely irritated although he is only subconsciously aware of her stupid habit.

Habit Escapes Detection

She hears perfectly well the first time but won't rouse her attention to the sticking point and lets the idea soak in by absorption. It is the laziest and most slovenly trick in the world, this of putting all the work on another.

If Bill had said he had been trying to find out the difference between ichthyology and entomology, Molly would have been justified perhaps in asking for a repetition, but it is the case with the sticky-minded that nothing at all soaks in at the first telling; easy or hard, it's all the same.

Children pick up this habit so easily that a mother or even a teacher may let it go unnoticed. They patiently repeat every sentence they utter. This mental lethargy is almost as blameworthy as the other.

At the moment I have in mind two families in whose homes no right-minded person could stay completely sane for twenty-four hours. Each member of the family has to repeat whatever he says twice. Each one asks to be told over again. A day is a succession of echoes that tell a tale of inattention if not actual stupidity.

Concentration Is Different

"Open the window, Jane," means just that. Jane should not be answered when she says, "What did you say?" when she has heard perfectly well. "See who is at the door, Billy," "Where is the paper?" should click at once. Why repeat it?

It is true that children are often deeply engrossed with something and actually do not hear. True, too, that we rudely interrupt others deep in a story or game by some unimportant remark that could wait. But this is different from the vacuum of inexcusable "rigor mortis" of the brain.

Nothing is more restful to the eavesdropper than to hear people converse with ears ajar and wis on the trigger. Children need to be taught both. Whether dumb or not, the mentally-lazy child will certainly earn the name if he does not snap out of it, and act and look intelligent when spoken to.

Molly might actually be a right smart girl. But if so she is keeping it a good secret.

GREAT TO FIND WORLD YET HOLDS MYSTERY
Russian explorers away up in the Arctic ocean claim that they have discovered a mysterious island which causes all approaching ships to change their course. Some weird kind of power or influence emanates from the island, they report, so that a ship which heads directly at it will presently find itself, for no apparent reason, traveling in the opposite direction.

Before some other expedition gets up there and explodes this eerie theory, it ought to be pointed out that this is the sort of thing modern exploration needs to make it exciting.
There never was a time in world history when explorers went out so elaborately equipped, both for discovery and for publicizing their discoveries; and there also never was a time when there was so little left for them to discover.

Exploration has begun to take on the aspects of a routine job, and the glamour has just about gone out of it.
But islands that turn ships off their route and remain unexplored because some mysterious, invisible force keeps people from getting at them—that, now, is something like it. If we can just get a few more such stories, our Byrds and Wilkines will become as romantic and picturesque as Frobenius and Magellan.

It isn't entirely a matter of jokes, really, this decline in the noble calling of the explorer. We sometimes seem to know a little too much about the world for our own good. It has no surprises left for us. Our imaginations don't get enough exercise, and that is bad for us.

There was a time when people could paint any kind of picture they liked about the lands beyond the horizon.
An imaginative geographer, for instance, could declare soberly that central Africa was inhabited by a race of men who had their heads beneath their shoulders, or he could go into exact details about some city far up the Amazon that was paved with solid gold; and nobody could contradict him, because nobody had ever been there or was likely to go there in the near future.

That sort of thing did not simply provide interesting reading matter for the fireside. It tickled the imagination and stirred the spirits, and made men feel that they lived in a limitless world wherein anything was possible to a man who dared greatly enough.

It gave men a sense of moving amid wonders and miracles, and it was good for the soul.
But now we are too wise. A yarn like this one about the Arctic island is the most we can stand, and we don't more than halfway believe it.

We have exhausted the world's physical possibilities.
As a result, we are restless and bored without knowing exactly why.

THE SLAUGHTER GOES ON
It is an appalling thing to reflect that automobile traffic killed no fewer than 2670 men, women, and children in one month in the United States; and it is hard to believe (though gratifying enough, once believed) that this shocking figure actually represents a substantial improvement over July of last year, when 3110 deaths were recorded.

Just why a nation which is supposed to be so clever at handling mechanical appliances should go on killing people with automobiles at such an astounding rate is one of the mysteries of the age. The one ray of light seems to be the fact that in some states, at least, the situation is improving slightly.

Twenty-one states, to be exact, have recorded fewer traffic deaths this year than during the same period of 1934. As far as it goes, that is excellent news; but we won't be able to crow until all the states, over a period of years, have shown a steady decline in the dreadful toll.

A WORTH-WHILE SURVEY
The frontier of medical knowledge should be pushed back appreciably by one of the relief stunts presently to be launched from Washington.
Some 5000 unemployed "white collar" workers will go out during October to start ringing doorbells and asking people how they have been feeling during the last year. Before they get through, they expect to get a comprehensive idea of health conditions among fully 3,000-000 Americans.

Thus, for the first time in medical history, it will be known just how diseases and disabilities are distributed throughout the nation by geographical divisions, by age, by sex, and by occupation.
The U. S. Public Health Service expects this knowledge to be of vast importance. Here, evidently, is at least one case in which relief expenditures are going to bring in a worth-while return.

"OLD RELIABLE" IN THE LEAD
The old reliable Associated Press led other press associations by forty minutes in delivering the news of the crash of Will Rogers and Wiley Post. It isn't given much to bragging, leaving that to competitors, but it plods along delivering goods of a high standard year in and out.

"A tenderfoot you take me for.
Please stop, because my legs are to the ground the wee lad sank.

All of the Twines laughed in glee,
'cause Duncy was a sight to see.
Said Goldy, "Say, you danced real well. Why did you have to stop?"
"The cowboy's cartridges were pranks. What made me laugh the most of all was seeing you go flop."

Then Duncy got up to his feet.
"I hope you all have had a treat at my expense," he shouted. "I was scared that I'd get shot."
This made the cowboy laugh.
"Ho, ho!" Said he, "Why, lad, you ought to know that I would never hurt you. You'll forgive me, like as not."
"Of course I will," said Duncy.
"Gee, I don't mind if you pick on

The dark land is Ethiopia, whose principal physical features are clearly shown. If there should be an Italian invasion, its course may readily be followed by reference to this map, which shows the obstacles as well as the actual location of towns and physical features. The oil and mineral concessions hastily granted to a mysterious foreign company lie in a not-too-precisely defined area from Lake Rudolf, lower left, northeast to a point east of Addis Ababa, and north to Eritrea. ORCHESTRA TO PLAY SCHUBERT MASTER-PIECE

Dixon Musicians Will be Assisted in Concert
Coming Sunday

Musicians from Rockford, LaSalle, Oregon and Mount Morris will participate with the Dixon Philharmonic orchestra in the presentation of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" at the Methodist church next Sunday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. The Ladies' Aid Society will sponsor the concert and a collection will be taken to cover expenses and for the benefit of the society. Each year the orchestra presents one symphony, of which this is the third and the public is cordially invited to enjoy the fruit of the organization's months of practice.

A feature will be a duet for two cellos, with piano accompaniment. Robert Smith and Samuel Samuelson will play the duet, and Robert will also have a solo. Concerning the symphony Director Samuelson writes:

"The great work of 1822 is the B Minor Symphony which has become famous as the 'Unfinished' Symphony. Again we are faced by the question as to the completeness or incompleteness of certain of Schubert's works. We have already quoted ourselves by stating that certain pieces having six movements are over-complete, while this piece, with its two movements that were deemed sufficient by the composer, is surely no less complete and 'finished.' But a certain fact gives us pause: we possess a sketch for a third movement carried on through the scherzo and trio, even though not for all the parts and instruments. Did Schubert wish to go on with the piece and he abandoned it because he lacked the inclination to do so? Or did he leave it because he was dissatisfied to continue it in this manner? Only the gods can answer that. In the end, he abandoned the whole symphony, for no one except Anselm Huttenbrenner knew anything of it and it was only discovered in 1865 by Hereck among the latter's papers. Be that as it may, let us rejoice that we have at least these two movements which, in our judgment, are better and more finished in their construction than any possible third movement.

"The B Minor Symphony begins, like so many others of Schubert's, with a theme played in unison. Here it is played as a mysterious pianissimo in the lower range by the 'cello and the basses. Then the violins add an accompanying figure of sixteenth notes, like the gurgle of water or the rustle of leaves. Already there is a hint of pastoral background in the music. To the accompaniment of the sixteenth notes a comforting rhythm, a melody is pronounced by oboes and clarinets, not a continuation of the first mysterious theme, but a song of 'linked sweetness long drawn out,' carried to the treble, seconded by English horns and bassoons till a close is reached in B Minor. Here is pure lyricism. One thought follows the other, unfolding in succession rather than developing one from the other. To a syncopated accompanying figure of clarinets and bass violins, the 'cello begins the second theme, that cradling air in G Major which, though written within a range of five notes, is so rich in beauty that it has come to be the most famous melody in the world. Rising from the manuscript hidden away for forty-three years, it has spread abroad until it has become an intimate possession of every soul. Schubert delights in this melody. He immediately raises it one octave, lets the violins take it up and send it down to the octave below; and this rise and fall causes more exquisite pleasure than any other treatment. He breaks off. Complete silence for one measure. Chords and then tremoli in G Minor, G Minor, and E Flat Major; the last is carried onward through a development of the third measure of the second theme until it passes away in the direction of G Major. Again a shaking up. A gain a repetition. The theme recurs, treated by violins and flutes (this time pronouncing the first two measures) until B is finally reached. It is clear that Schubert treats this theme, which is melody itself, as pure music, as nothing but sounds which one may play with, may invert and marshal against one another. We have come to the frontiers of that period in which sounds were not the only material of music but the material of the spirit.

"In this manner Schubert treats the first theme with which the Symphony begins in the mysterious basses. We have not heard it again since the prelude. Now it reappears at the beginning of the second part. And what does he make of it? After the basses have given it another hearing, its first measures ascend in the violins above the weird tremolo of a low C in an incredible moving lamentation carried by a long suspension. It is carried on in this strain until it breaks out in a great outcry of pain which fades away in drooping chords. Theme has become emotion but emotion is converted into theme. The whole orchestra takes it up with full strength and turns it over in counterpoint through rolling runs, through

Toronto, Ont.—As the Maternity Derby contestants move into the last lap before the finish line is reached on Oct. 31, 1936, a dark horse entry moves up to challenge for the lead.

The entry consists of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Graziano, hitherto disregarded as contenders for the $500,000 prize established in the sardonic will of Charles Millar for the women bearing the most babies within 10 years after Millar's death in 1926.

The Grazianos have revealed that they are the parents of nine children, eight born since the "deadline," and presumably eligible to count on the tally sheet.

Entry of the Grazianos has thus heightened interest in the race and stimulated the other contestants to further efforts. Mrs. John Nagle, for instance, has just moved up from a seventh on the list by announcing the birth of her ninth eligible child. She is the youngest of the contestants, only 30.

Mrs. Matthew Kenny and the youngest of her brood.

Leaders Are 'Expecting'

But Mrs. Matthew Kenny, generally regarded as in the lead with her 11 eligible children, and Mrs. Grace Bagnato, runner-up with nine, are no title in the face of this new double challenge. Each has announced that she expects another child "soon."

No one on the little street of 20 houses where the Grazianos live suspected that they planned to enter the Maternity Derby. Gus himself hadn't planned to say anything about it until next year. But the news got out.

"We will wait until October, 1936, before we talk too much," says Graziano. "I know something. I know that all my children are registered at the parliament buildings."

By this Graziano refers to continual bickering among contestants over the question of how many of the children of each are properly registered and eligible.

Born in Sicily, Graziano is nevertheless a loyal Canadian with no love for Mussolini despite his adherence to Mussolini's principle of unlimited families.

"I would fight for Canada, but pointed beats till the clouds are dispersed. The fog lifts, and the clear landscape of the opening is disclosed. The entire lyrical section is repeated. Then the mysterious octave again steps forward. It weaves its own entanglement it builds up longing, it mourns toward a close in the woodwinds, violin and basses.

"The second movement, the Andante con moto, begins as if nothing had ever existed—down of the world; clear chords in horns and bassoons; melodic ascent of violins; a three-eighths measure which moves without definite accent. An outburst of a seventh chord follows chromatically united with it, a cluster of sevenths shines forth. Instruments alternate with one another in soft chords, in runs on the octave; sevenths glisten, melodies twinkle, the line grows tenser, becomes articulate, a sonant mirror. The violin takes up G Sharp and lets it descend to C Sharp Minor. The strings syncopate an accompaniment. The clarinet raises its voice in simple third, singing a melody of such moving sadness, so broadly, so intensely that the violins tremble (lightly bowing over the dominant) and seem to weep. The middle voices descend, vary enharmonically, until the tune of the clarinets become more and more spiritual and they wander back to C Sharp, passing through the circle of harmonies.

"Everything is so permeated with melody that the instruments seem to utter their song as if from human lips and the voices in their eternal questioning and answering seek the infinite through music."

decide," said the diminutive Mrs. Kenny with resignation. "I'm agreeable to whatever's fair."

Mrs. Stefano Darrigo, whose standing in the contest is disputed because two or three of her children died too young to be registered, maintained a judicious silence.

Millar must be grinning in his grave to see all the hullabaloo his will has brought to staid Toronto. The same sardonic humor that led him to bequeath brewery and livery stock to ministers who had been active against drinking and horse-racing apparently dictated the Maternity Derby provision of the will.

The confusion, the charges and counter-charges among the contestants, the reported agreement among six couples to share, whoever wins, the proposals to contest the will in court, and the general furor of discussion as to the propriety of the whole business is undoubtedly just what Millar would have wished.

The other leaders in the race were no perturbed by the new entry of the Grazianos. "They still haven't as many children registered as I have," Mrs. Bagnato said.

Hullabaloo Reigns

"It will be up to the courts to

This is clear magic. An oboe in D Flat Major begins the melody in thirds, while the 'cello plays around it, letting the melody glide downward from the heights over tonic and dominant into an appealing simple figure, chaste and direct in its sentiment. Then the flute begins and the oboe softly replies as in a dream, a response which the other instruments try to emulate. But we know our Schubert here as elsewhere, what was soul becomes motive. In the unison of full orchestra the bass picks up the theme of the clarinets and conducts it over the other parts through a set of figures, as though it were a kind of formal theme subject to development. But the lyric now prevails and gladly returns. Though the rule required slow movements to contain such tutti outbursts, it was none the less possible to interweave and entwine thematic parts gracefully in lyrical mood and measure. Now the time has come to return to the beginning. Changed in keys, the same story begins all over again, more emphatic in the regulation of counterpoint, where there is room for a large gesture. In the finale we have again the delicate gesture shaping the phrase with lyrical tenderness—unaccompanied strains of the violins; interspersed among them, chords of the woodwinds in unrelated keys; a lovely flashing of the figure in sevenths; descent and the last low breath."

The United States contains approximately 12,000 secondary schools serving about 750,000 children.

DAILY HEALTH

HEART FACTS

Those who are fond of having their facts in a mathematical form will be interested in the following items given by Dr. Sydney R. Miller, associate in medicine at Johns Hopkins university.

Beating at an average rate of 60 times per minute, the human heart contracts 3,600 times an hour, 86,000 times a day, and over 30,000,000 times in the course of a year.

At each contraction the heart expels from the left chamber (ventricle) approximately 3 ounces of freshly oxygenated blood.

Dr. Miller presents these figures as a foundation upon which to rest ten "heart commandments" for those 50 years of age and over. These commandments we heartily endorse. They are as follows:

1. Do not subject your heart to sudden, strenuous or prolonged physical exertion.

2. Eat regularly, slowly and temperately.

3. If you are excessively overweight, see sound counsel as to how best to dispense with this form of heart handicap.

4. Endeavor to avoid physical activity for at least 30 minutes after eating, particularly after the heaviest meal of the day.

5. So far as is possible, avoid emotional stress and strain. One might particularly emphasize the importance of the factor of worry in its relation to heart strain.

6. By appropriate measures, keep your body as free as possible from so-called foci (or centers) of infection.

7. The importance of regularity of intestinal elimination cannot be over-emphasized.

8. Average not less than eight hours of sleep in a room abundantly supplied with fresh air.

9. Perennial health demands a proper balance between the factors of work, play and rest.

10. A periodic examination may often reveal defects of which you are totally unaware. A stitch in time saves nine!

9-Year-Old Slayer Arraigned in Court

New York, Sept. 4.—(AP)—The case of Philip Oehler, 9, who confessed to killing a 4-year-old girl in a fit of temper, will be presented to the Bronx grand jury.

Sobbing and clinging to his mother's skirts, the boy was arraigned Tuesday in Bronx children's court as a juvenile delinquent. Justice Jacob Panken adjourned his hearing until Sept. 12, and said he would have the boy examined by a psychiatrist.

The slain child was Elizabeth Vonderhofen. Philip told detectives he struck her with a stone last Saturday and ripped the clothing from her body after an argument "about whether peaches are better than any other fruit."

125 Candidates Report For Dixon High School Opening Grid Practice

Fundamentals Are Practiced By A Huge Squad

One hundred twenty-five candidates, the largest assemblage ever to report for Dixon high school football, cavorted for three and a half hours on the Purple and White gridiron Tuesday afternoon in the first drill of the 1935 season.

Coach C. B. Lindell issued uniforms to several lettermen and lightweight second stringers Monday, but the flood of candidates that reported on the field Tuesday necessitated the ordering of more uniforms to outfit those who seemingly have prospects of surviving the several cuts in the line-up that will be made.

The afternoon was spent in practicing fundamentals of the game. The candidates were put through rigorous exercises, tackled the dummy, punted and passed the ball and taught a few of the simplest formations. Time was spent in running down under punts and catching long passes.

Prospects brighten
Coach C. B. Lindell's line prospects, already bright, were given added luster by the appearance of bulky Bill Christos, formerly of Amboy high school. Christos weighs in the neighborhood of 200 pounds and is expected to boost the average of the present 160 pound line that Coach Lindell will place ahead of his green backfield that yet must take shape.

Three tentative teams were made up on the field yesterday two of them including in a light formation practice against each other, and the third under the tutelage of Don Barnhart, 1934 graduate and former star, ran through a brief signal drill.

One team composed of the heavier boys included McMillon, right end; Boos, right tackle; Marshall, right guard; Schumm, center; Passetti, left guard; Evans, left tackle and Klein, left end in the line, with "Shires" Miller, left half; Rebeck, fullback; Watts, quarterback, and Coper, right half. They opposed a lighter team in which Bill Christos, the only heavyweight in the line up was tried out at left tackle. The Almond brothers acted as guards. Strong was fullback. Kittson an end, Burke and Hipple halves, and Little at quarterback. Several changes and readjustments were expected today and no definite line-up will be certain until the first game with Rock Falls, September 21, gives Coach Lindell a better idea of his talent in uniform and in action under fire.

PERRY PROVES CONSISTENCY IS NECESSARY

Budge, Only Rival Who Can Extend The Briton

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 4.—(AP)—Fred J. Perry of England has one virtue that no other player in the 54th men's national singles tennis championship can claim. It is consistency.

Perry can and at times does turn in an indifferent performance but not when anything is at stake. He wasn't too impressive in his early matches but his exhibition in trouncing Frankie Parker, fourth-ranking American, dissipated any notion the defending champion would take undue chances.

He wants to be the first foreigner to win the American title three times.

Perry's next opponent is Frank Shields, No. 3 on the United States list. They will meet in the quarter-finals.

The one player in the homebred ranks considered to have much chance of extending Perry is young Don Budge of Oakland, Calif., a sensation at Wimbledon this year. They are prospective finalists.

As the result of yesterday's rain, which caused the second postponement since the men's women's and veterans' championships started last Thursday, the men's final now is scheduled for Sunday at the earliest.

Today's program calls for fourth-round men's matches pitting Wilmer Allison against Gene Mako and Roderich Menzel against Gregory S. Mangin.

Helen Jacobs, defending champion, meets Evelyn Dearman of England in a third-round match. A quarter-final match brings together Mrs. Sarah Paley Fabyan and Freda James of England. They met in the same round a year ago with Mrs. Fabyan winning in straight sets.

GRID GIANTS NO LONGER RULE AT TROJANS' SCHOOL

Jones Says Lighter Men Proved Fast And Cleverer

This is the second of a series of articles for afternoon papers on football prospects at leading universities and colleges for the 1935 season.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
By PAUL ZIMMERMAN
Los Angeles, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Grid giants are out at the University of Southern California this year.

This was the emphatic announcement of Coach Howard Jones today as he pondered over the task of salvaging from the 1934 season's wreckage material for the coming season.

"We had too many men on the team last year," said Troy's head man today, "who couldn't handle their weight. If I wasn't convinced before, I am now, that size doesn't determine strength of a football player."

"Of course a big man who can handle himself is all right but they are scarce, while we saw plenty of players weighing 175 to 180 pounds last year who could put a 200 pounder out of the play."

Order to Reduce
So the order has gone out from the Trojan grid battlements to reduce and the incoming reports are favorable to Coach Jones.

Troy's mentor plans no drastic changes in his football setup to bring his team back into its winning stride. He is going to give the line, which was so weak a year ago, concentrated personal attention, convinced that if the forwards function properly the offense and defense will pretty well take care of themselves.

"Open up the offense and throw laterals? Sure," he said, "if we can find players capable of handling them. But my team is not going to throw the ball around a lot because it is the popular thing to do and have the passes fail."

"Ambition on the part of the players is our element of hope. We are in a better position to have a good team than we were last year. We have no All-Americans. Nobody is sitting on a pedestal."

None Are Great
There is none on the squad who can say he is a great grid player after what happened to us last year. Everybody is going to work harder this year and that includes the coaches.

The schedule:

RAIN CAUSES GIANTS TEAM GREAT WORRY

Pennant Hopes Are Dripping Away By Degrees

By ANDY CLARKE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Dolorous Bill Terry looked up at the black skies, felt the rain falling and bemoaned the turn of events that seemed to him to be dictated by a malicious fate.

The Giants, just one game behind the Cardinals on Labor Day, had hoped to sweep a doubleheader with the Phils while wishing ill luck to the Cards, who were engaged in a double bill with the Pirates.

The rain washed out the Giant games while the Cards bagged two and went two up on the New Yorkers in the league standing.

Rain caused postponement of the doubleheader again yesterday, and Terry and his men disconsolately packed their bags and set off for Cincinnati with some tough jousting ahead if they would fly the bunting at the end of the tourney.

They must battle on foreign fields and against worthy foes whereas the Cardinals draw some soft picking in their own ball yard.

The Cubs, only a half game behind the Giants, also will be entertaining at home. With the second division Phils, Braves and Dodgers scheduled to be their guests, they loom as a strong threat to bust right out in front of the present leaders. They are not listed to play a single doubleheader before they mix with the Giants in a four-game series.

Only Bright Spot
The only bright spot in the coming drive, as far as the Giants are concerned, is that the season closes with the Cards and the Cubs in each other's hair, while the Giants will be engaging Brooklyn and the tail-end Braves.

With the Tigers drifting farther and farther away from the pack in the American League, the old cry of too great a concentration of power has been sounded again. It was the same cry that went up in the Ruthian heyday of the Yanks and it has brought about an early discussion of trades.

With the games rained out in all sectors yesterday, the dopesters sat around and discussed possibilities. It is known that the Yanks intend to bolster their outfield with new talent, Washington is preparing to sell or barter, and Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox has signified his intention of swapping gold for hitting power.

Connie Mack is reported ready to consider cash offers for Higgins and Fox while Mickey Cochrane may let Walker and Owen go. There are a host of other rumors in the wind.

PLAY-OFF POSSIBLE
Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Cold figures, based strictly on comparative records of club against club so far this season, today pointed to a post season playoff series between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants for the National League pennant.

Over in the American League, they indicated that Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Bengals would win the pennant by a full nine game margin over the New York Yankees, who were exactly that far behind them today.

The abilities of the various contenders to win and lose games at home and abroad were not taken into consideration. Percentages of results to date only were used. For instance, the Cardinals and Pittsburgh have two games left against each other. To date, they have split even, each winning 10 for a .500 average. Thus, the figures say it's a victory apiece in the final two games. Against the Giants, the Cards have a winning percentage of only .389, which would indicate nothing better than an even break at most for the Cards in their final four games against Terry's men.

Doped to Win 16
On the percentage basis, the Cardinals are doped to win 16 and lose 12 of their remaining games against the other seven clubs for a final record of 95 victories and 59 defeats.

The Giants, unless they fold up on the road, are expected to win 19 out of their remaining 39 for the same record, necessitating the first play off series since the era of Fred Merkle's "boner."

On the same basis, the Cubs will win 13 and lose 10 to land in third place with 92 victories and 62 defeats as against 14 victories and eight setbacks for the Pirates, who then would finish fourth at 88-66. In the American League, on the same basis, Detroit would win 16 and lose 11 for a total of 99 victories and 55 losses; the Yankees would win 17 and lose 12 for a final standing of 90 and 64.

CHICAGO TEAM WILL BATTLE DIXON BOXERS

Catholic Youth Men Bring Flashy Entrants

Boxers forming a team from the Chicago Catholic Youth organization will journey to Dixon, Monday, September 9 for a team match with seven boxers representing the Dixon Athletic club at the airport hangar here promoters of the local fortnightly cards said this morning.

The matches will be featured by a heavyweight battle between Al Camber of Chicago and Raymond Doll of Chillicothe, the latter on Dixon's team, each boxer going into the ring weighing 200 pounds. These boys are the heaviest pair yet matched in the local arena since the matches were organized on a regular fortnightly basis.

Stunkie Heads List
On Dixon's team will be Bernard Stunkie of Steward, Rockford district Golden Gloves champion and one of the most popular youthful fighters in northern Illinois, Russell Ringenberger, Chillicothe, 128 pound Golden Gloves champion, Louis Viscioni, Moline, 147 pound welterweight champion in the Moline district, Merle Starick, 175 pound title-holder from Chillicothe in the Sreator district, Sam Karben, Moline, 135 pound crown-winner, and Billy LeHue, Moline, who knocked out Harry Kobleman of Tampico in two seconds a few weeks ago. LeHue and his opponent will go into the ring weighing 160 pounds.

Following are the pairings, the first named from Chicago:
Harry Sparrow, 120 lbs., vs. Bernard Stunkie, five rounds.
Andy Servani, 128 lbs., vs. Russell Ringenberger, five rounds.
Jake Lamkin, 147 lbs., vs. Louis Viscioni.

Ray Wozniak, 175 lbs., vs. Merle Starick.
Jim Pazy, 135 lbs., vs. Sam Karben.
Honor Thomas, 160 lbs., vs. Billy LeHue.

SIR MALCOLM BESTED AUTO SPEED RECORD

Recheck of Timer Reveals Error in Figures

Salt Lake City, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell and his Bluebird racer were poised today for a triumphant return to England with a record—finally computed correctly—of 301.1292 miles an hour on land.

A "silly mistake"—the words were Sir Malcolm's—kept the "human bullet" for hours in the belief he had failed on the Bonneville salt flats to achieve his dream of a mile in 12 seconds.

The fact he had bettered his previous record of 276.816 miles an hour by more than 23 miles, as originally figured by the timers, brought only a wry face and a declaration he would have to "go through it all again" Thursday.

It was far into the night before the officials of the American Automobile association sent word hurriedly to the intrepid driver, with many apologies, that they had made a mistake.

The announcement brought from Campbell the declaration he was "delighted" but that the news was rather in the form of an anticlimax.

Alters Previous Plans
He altered previous plans to try again tomorrow and ordered the six-ton, 2,500-horsepower Bluebird prepared for shipment, he will embark at New York September 12, with "The Old Lady," as he calls his racer, probably on board the same ship, the Majestic.

The error came on the return run, after Campbell had flashed northward across the gleaming salt plain at 304.311 miles an hour and brought his huge racer to a safe stop despite a blown front tire.

The timers first computed his southbound mile at 295.566 miles an hour, for an average of 299.875 miles an hour. A later check of the electrically marked tape showed the return mile was run in 12.08 seconds, instead of the 12.18 seconds—or 298.013 miles an hour—originally announced, which accounted for the increased average finally credited.

Campbell indicated in an interview last night he intends to let his new mark stand at least until someone else beats it. Then he may try again.

"Someone can build a better machine and go faster," he said. "Whatever you can do, I can do, and whatever I can do, someone else can do better."

DO YOU REMEMBER?

One Year Ago Today — Vansant, driven by Fred Egan, trotted a mile for a new record of 2:00 3-4 at Syracuse.

Five Years Ago Today—The Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox went 15 innings before the former prevailed 8-7.

Ten Years Ago Today—Bennett Hill averaged 133.1 miles an hour at Altona to win the annual auto race and set a new speed record.

Joe Louis to Marry After His Next Bout

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Wedding bells are going to ring for Joe Louis, the Detroit boxer.

Miss Marva Trotter, Chicago stenographer, said Tuesday she and Louis plan to be married in New York after his fight with Max Baer there Sept. 24.

"I'm not marrying him because he is a great fighter," said the slightly built 19-year-old girl. "He's a fine man, modest and gentlemanly."

Sensational Horse-shoe Pitching Marks Final in Tournament

Moline, Ill., Sept. 4.—(AP)—Ted Allen was still the national horse-shoe pitching champion today but the Alhambra, Cal., ringer tosser had to share a world's record to retain his title.

When Allen squared off against Harvey Elmerston of Milwaukee in the final game for each yesterday, the latter needed a victory over the defending titleholder to go into a tie for first place.

Against an average performance he would have achieved the triumph but Allen threw 13 consecutive double ringers—a new record—at one stage of the match and came through with a close 50 to 48 victory to clinch the championship again.

Allen's final standing in the round robin battle was 21 wins and two losses—one more victory and one less loss than compiled by Elmerston in finishing second. The victory earned $290 as his share of the $1,400 prize money; Elmerston $240.

Knox College Coach Predicts Long Losing Streak Will End

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—Knox College, take it from Head Football Coach C. W. "Pete" Reynolds, will snap its losing gridiron streak this fall. The Swish footballers have not known victory in their last 27 games, extending over a four-year period, and Reynolds thinks something should be done about it.

"I looked over the material," Reynolds said today, "and it's good. Knox will depend mostly on sophomores, with a sprinkling of veterans."

Preparing to leave here for Galesburg, home of "Old Swish," Reynolds added thoughtfully "maybe I'd better tell the bellringers to get their arms in good condition so that they won't be crippled the first time we win."

Celebron Beaten in 2 to 1 Decision Bout

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—A fast finish in the 10th and final round gave Laddie Tonielli of Marseilles, Ill., a decision over Billy Celebron of Rockford in the main event of the Western Stadium's boxing show last night. Tonielli weighed 145 and Celebron scaled 146.

Tonielli piled up a wide margin with his left hand during the opening rounds, but lost some of the later rounds by not punching and his rival's comeback with a busy right. In the final round, Tonielli opened up to outpoint his rival. The two judges split on the decision, but the referee cast his ballot for Tonielli.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

RUTH WOODSON, an attractive, high-spirited girl of 19, an orphan, lives in Brookings with her cousins, the LAWRENCEs. She feels herself a burden to her relatives and realizes that her only chance to escape is to get off the bus at the next stop. Ruth is bewildered and hysterically weeps at her plight.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

RUTH ceased laughing as suddenly as she had begun. She opened her pocketbook and counted her money. She had exactly $1.11. She counted it several times over, looking at the pennies and hoping they might be dimes, hoping the nickels might be quarters masquerading.

"A dollar and eleven cents," she said softly, "any way you slice it."

A native, leaning against the doorpost with his thumb thrust in his suspenders, eyed her lazily.

"Hadn't you better buy yer ticket?" Ruth's face colored. "No," she answered, "I hadn't."

She did not know how far she was from Cleveland or what the fare would be, but common sense told her it would be more than she had in her pocketbook. She'd been a fool to get into this plight, she thought. She had twice let herself be thrown off her course by that good-natured, irresponsible nitwit of a Mrs. Cogly.

She figured ruefully. "There's no telling where this Girls' Industrial League is. It may be in Indian-apolis. It may be in St. Louis. It sounds swell, but Mrs. Cogly's dizzy when it comes to geography."

Nevertheless, since her face was turned toward Cleveland, she would go to Cleveland or at least try to go there.

The bus was coming. The old man against the doorpost yanked his suspender. "There's yer chariot," he said.

Ruth gathered up her bundles and got on. It was a local, small and rather shabby. About half its seats were filled. Ruth chose a place directly behind the driver, as this gave her an opportunity to overhear.

"Please," she said to him in a muffled voice, "I'd like to ride till I've used up $1.11."

"Mam!" replied the driver. He was too surprised to put his car in motion.

RUTH repeated her remark patiently and added, "I want to get as close to Cleveland as I can."

The driver, a big, red-faced fellow, more on the side of brawn than brain, scratched his chin and thought. He seemed to arrive at some decision, for he put out his hand and said, "Gimme yer dollar, keep the 11 cents." He took the change she handed him.

Quarter Section corner between Section Two (2) and Section Eleven (11) in the Township and Range aforesaid, thence South sixteen (16) chains and six (6) links to the center of the public road. Again, commencing at the same point and running thence East three and one-half (3.5) chains to a post, thence South fourteen (14) chains and fifty-six (56) links to the public road and bounded on the South by said road and containing five and thirty-five one-hundredths (5.35) acres more or less.

EAST INLET

By BLANCHE CLARKE
EAST INLET—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clayton entertained the following over the week end, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Cusack, son James, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gilbert, Clarence Brown, known as "Amos" over WLS, all of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarke entertained the following Sunday, Maude Jacobs of Compton, Alfred Mueller, Fern Clarke of Sublette, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Dyer and Miss Blanche Clarke of Amboy.

Word has been received from Marian Hagendorn that he has been accepted into the army and is stationed at Fort Sheridan. He has enlisted for four years.

Rudolph Hieden was in Amboy Saturday on business.

Robert Bartlett was an Amboy shopper Tuesday.

Viola Hagerman is working at the cannery factory at Mendota.

Edward Clarke Sr. motored to Aurora Saturday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clayton, Ethel Cecilia, Mrs. Glen Huff and son Edward, Mrs. Ernest Cusack and son James visited relatives in Amboy Saturday.

Miss Margaret Wheeler, R. N. of Dixon visited a few days at the home of her brother, James Wheeler.

The people in this community ex-

Ruth had exactly a dollar and eleven cents. She counted it several times.

punched a register and shifted gear. They were off.

Ruth leaned back and relaxed. She was learning to live minute by minute, to hold fear at bay while she savored the rich morsel of the present. "I believe you'd call this the middle west," she thought, looking out at the gorgeous autumn landscape. "It's grand. I like it. Imagine people in New York thinking New York's everything!" She pictured America like a huge gay map unrolling before her, varied and wonderful.

All at once Ruth realized that she was very hungry. She had eaten no lunch. Her breakfast had been a cup of coffee and a roll. The day before, of course, she had left the Lawrence house on the eve of Cousin Bessie's birthday dinner. Thinking back a step farther, she recalled the lone chocolate bar that had sustained her while job hunting.

"No wonder my skirt feels loose at the waist," she thought, placing her hand on her flat young stomach.

She began to imagine how nice it would be if a motherly looking woman would get on the bus and sit down beside her and open a lunch box. "And offer me some of everything," she thought rapturously. "Deviled eggs and ham sandwiches and chocolate cake."

She had to quit thinking about it. An hour or two later the driver half-turned and spoke to her out of the corner of his mouth: "You'll have to get off at the next stop—"

Ruth leaned toward him. "Why can't you take me in to Cleveland?" she asked. "There's room, and I'm not doing any harm sitting here—"

"I've already carried you 40 miles beyond your fare," he told her. "There's been room so far. But look what's coming! I can't let you keep a seat from a paying passenger—"

"All right." He shrugged his tired shoulders. "But when one more gets on, off you go!" The car began to move.

Again Ruth relaxed. A storm was coming up and the bus seemed cozy and secure as it passed through the streets of the self-centered little city. Out there people were hurrying and scurrying before the gusts of wind and the sudden flares of lightning. Within the bus was security.

But on the town's edge the bus halted. A man was standing, waiting to get on. The driver said to Ruth Woodson, "Well, here we are! Pull yourself together, kid, and hop off." He seemed regretful, and hop off.

Ruth got off, and the passenger got on. She held her head high as the bus drove away. She even raised her hand in faint salute to the driver. But she was shivering. It was as if a cozy little house had been lifted from over her head by a cyclone, leaving her stranded and shelterless.

She looked around her. She was in the suburbs of a strange, old-fashioned town, made more gloomy by the breaking storm. A flash of lightning rent the air with terrific brightness. The crashing thunder that followed seemed to open the floodgates for the rain. It began to pour in wind-driven sheets.

Just beyond an iron fence Ruth saw a huge, tall house of dingy stone set in a tangled lawn. A refuge. She opened a creaking gate and ran up the grass-grown walk, head bowed against the rain.

She pounded upon the door with her two small, frantic fists, her body plastered there by the driving storm. Yet even in this extremity she noticed something strange. She noticed that the great, carved door was cleanly painted a brilliant blue.

It seemed to Ruth that the storm must break and bruise her there against the closed door of that great, gaunt house. Her clothes were drenched and limp. Her heart was pounding strangely. Her head felt light. The footsteps that she heard beyond the door sounded hollow and unreal as they drew nearer.

The door opened a crack and a thin old woman, with peering eyes and bent back, stepped out. Before a word had passed between them, Ruth knew that she was going to faint. As she crumpled to the floor she could hear the old woman running across the porch and calling frantically. It sounded like "Mister John! Mister John!"

When she opened her eyes she was lying on a strange bed in a strange room. Her head was spinning like a top that is slowly running down. On one side of the bed stood the bent old woman, like a wizened statue. At the foot of the bed stood a young man with a body like a football player and a face that she might have dreamed. It was strong and humorous and sure of itself. The chin was square, the brow broad. She could not tell the color of the hair or the eyes, but the former was rumpled and the latter were smiling at her.

The old woman leaned over her. "Are you stronger now, Miss Elaine?" she asked.

"I'm fine," Ruth said brightly. "Just fine." And then she felt herself floating away again.

Beyond the range of her consciousness a cracked old voice was saying, "Lord help us, young John McNeill! What's to be done?" And the young man's answer, coming almost roughly, "It's food she needs! Can't you see?"

Manslaughter Charge "Constitution Day" Against Husband Who Killed Wife's Lover

Chicago, Sept. 4.—(AP)—A coroner's jury has returned a verdict recommending that manslaughter charges be placed against Robert V. Richards for the death of Lief Larson, 35, whom the 34-year-old shipping clerk claimed was too friendly with his wife, Jean, 27. Larson was found dead Saturday in an alley, shot four times.

Prior to the inquest Richards said he would plead "self-defense and the unwritten law." He displayed bruises and bandages in support of his statement. Larson knocked him down. This he said provoked him to fire.

From the witness stand Jean said she had known Larson ten and a half months and had "gone with him steadily" since then.

NEW TOKENS IN USED BY CHAINS

They Make Appearance
Chicago: Downstate
Gets Them Later

Chicago, Sept. 4—(AP)—If your cigar store clerk were a puzzled frown today, or if the grocer ticked off his fingers as he made change, it was not due to the week end holiday—but the sales tax tokens.

The second issue of this "money that isn't money" went into the public's hands today, distributed throughout Chicago largely by chain establishments. The new tokens, square and carrying cryptic figures "1½", replaced an earlier series, round and too close to a 10-cent piece in size to win approval of the Federal government.

Each of the tokens, made of aluminum, represented the 3 per cent tax on a purchase of five cents, or a face value of one and one-half mills.

More than 15,000,000 tokens had been made available to Chicago merchants, the state department of finance said, and a similar amount will be put out downstate within a week or 10 days.

Scale of Payments
The scale of tax payments as used by Chicago chain stores:

Sales up to 4 cents, no tokens; 5 cents, one token, each four cents additional up to 30 cents, another token 31 to 33 cents, one cent; 34 to 38 cents, one cent and one token; 39 to 43 cents, one cent plus two tokens and so on up to 66 to 69 cents, where it was two cents. A token then was added to the charge until the 97 cents-$1 range was reached, where the tax was three cents.

All this sounded complicated, and as one perplexed buyer of cigarettes studied the placard announcing the new system he muttered: "It's a good thing I'm an accountant."

Mt. Kisco, N. Y.—Richard Mandell and his wife and two little boys live here in what is undoubtedly the most spectacular house, both as to location and details of structure and furnishing, in the country.

This is an ultra-modern building in which there is every conceivable convenience, where bookcases and mirrors are outlined with light, weather is made to order at any hour, tables and mantels furnish their own illumination, and there is an irreducible minimum of dust-accumulation surface.

The unique dwelling, constructed with cinder concrete fireproof walls and steel and concrete floors, sits in lonely majesty on a hill in the midst of a sixty-two acre estate. From every window one glimpses magnificent vistas of sparkling water and wooded slopes. One entire wall of the enormous living room is glass so that none of the view will be shut off.

Rooms Flooded With Sunlight
Sunlight is the prime object. The dining room has a semi-circular outside wall constructed of glass bricks. Every master bedroom has its own spacious sun-deck, and the guest rooms have private patios. Use is made, too, of magna light glass, which is translucent and throws light into the room in winter.

Furniture, wall treatments and fabrics throughout are modern. The stair rails are chromium, the floors of rubber, cork or mastic tile. Glass and bakelite are used for table tops. The ground floor serves as an entrance to the dwelling and also to house the heating and air conditioning plants, which would be relegated to a basement if there were one. This floor includes a plant room with dozens of varieties of cacti embedded into a great concrete trough running almost the length of the room; an office, a bar and powder room.

VISITING MOST MODERN HOME in U. S. A.

Unity of Setting, Architecture, Furnishing and Decoration in Richard Mandell Residence Achieves A Distinctive and Spectacular Effect

Above, on the main floor, the living room, stair hall and library are combined into one great unit which can be divided with draperies. Nearly all the lighting is concealed, and even the fixtures, when there are any, seem to be part of the wall for the piece of furniture they illumine.

Bric-a-Brac Avoided
Colors in the living room are white, yellow and beige, with two chairs in green leather. The rug is gray beige, high piled. The fireplace wall is made of cork, the west wall is all windows and the others are of plaster, painted gray-beige. After the modern manner, there are few ornaments—just one big vase on the mantel (the mantel lights from inside, by the way), a few ash trays, and some pictures on the wall. Later there will be several pieces of carefully-chosen statuary.

The wood used for the furniture is English pollard oak, made interestingly enough, from the growth on a certain kind of English oak tree. The library end of the great room is paneled in Surmounting a hill that commands an awe-inspiring vista in all directions is the Richard Mandell house (left below) near Mt. Kisco, New York. Its modern outlines are apparent, the set-back floors providing patios or terraces for all rooms. The many windows testify to the value its owners put on light. And inside, such interesting rooms as the game room at left, with its colorful mural over the circular seat, cork floors, and the glass-topped tables reflect the careful planning. Below is the living room, one side of which is a continuous window. Note the simplicity of decoration, elimination of bric-a-brac and the apparent lack of lighting fixtures on the walls.

brown oak. The radio is part of paneling and the loud speaker is a small register over one door. The book shelves have lighting around the top and sides.

The Master's Room

Mr. Mandell's own bedroom has Oriental wicker furniture and a dark brown carpet. The bedspread is yellow, his desk chair is done in black patent leather and an arm-chair is gray, black and yellow. The adjustable shaving mirror in his red, black and white bathroom, the convenient chests built into the window sills and his black-tiled shower would make him the envy of any man.

Chests throughout are mostly built in, and many serve a stables too. Mrs. Mandell's room has white linoleum on the floor, a bright blue rubber border part of the way around the three white and one blue walls. The blue wall is reflected in the large mirror over the white marble mantel. The wood use in here is rubbed bird's-eye maple. The rugs are high piles of white woven wool.

Many Little Conveniences

The house is full of neat little gadgets, such as floodlights for protection against burglars, three-way mirrors in dressing rooms so that you can see all sides of your self at once, glass dressing tables with mirrors completely rimmed with lights; a special ceiling in the serving pantry to deaden the sound of dishes being banged about; a dumb waiter to bring the children their meals in their own private dining-playroom, where they have a cork wall and floor; a baked enamel coal-burning stove in the kitchen that goes 24 hours at a cost of $24 a year, regulates itself, and has a water heating reservoir.

The architect who planned the house was Edward Stone. Donald Deskey had charge of the decoration and choosing the furniture. The two worked together constantly while the building was going on—a fact that is chiefly responsible for the harmony of the whole.

Don Lerdall has resigned his position as circulation manager of the Telegraph and will enter the University of Illinois the last week of September when that school opens for the fall term.

Don has been employed by the Telegraph for over a year and the popularity he enjoyed with his carrier boys was one indication of his ability as circulation manager. His friends at the Telegraph and in Dixon wish him well on his venture into higher education.

ONE AND THREE QUARTER BILLIONS IS SOUGHT

Washington, Sept. 4—(AP)—The Treasury has undertaken a $1,750,000,000 financing operation aimed at retiring the last of the World War Liberty bonds and raising new funds to bolster its cash balance.

The amount of Liberties to be refunded totals $1,250,000,000, the last of $8,000,000,000 sold to the public in war times. Secretary Morgenthau said holders of the bonds, called for redemption October 15, may exchange them for new low-interest-bearing securities or cash.

In addition to the refunding, the Treasury is seeking to borrow $500,000,000 to replenish cash reserves and supply new working capital for governmental activities. If the borrowing is successful, the public debt will reach, at least temporarily, a new all-time high—more than $29,500,000,000.

Under Morgenthau's offer, holders of maturing 4 1/4 fourth Liberty bonds may exchange them for 10-12 year 2 3/4 per cent bonds, 3 1/2 year 1 1/2 per cent notes, or cash. The 1 1/2 per cent notes also are open to cash bids of $500,000,000, but the bonds may be obtained only on a trade-in basis.

The new bonds will bear interest from September 1, payable semi-annually. They will mature September 15, 1947, but may be redeemed at the Treasury's option two years prior to that date.

The new notes offered for cash and in exchange for the bonds also will be dated September 15 and will mature March 15, 1939.

AAA May Allow More Hogs Grown to Feed U. S. Folk Next Year

Washington, Sept. 4—(AP)—Farmers will be asked to vote this fall whether they want to continue a corn-hog adjustment program in 1936.

With hog prices around the parity figure and pork prices drawing consumer resentment, Claude

Wickard, corn-hog chief for the farm administration, said today hearings would be held on the need for an adjustment program and a referendum conducted among the farmers.

Farm administration officials already have expressed the opinion they believe a control program necessary next year to keep corn and hog production in balance. They have said, however, they would aim at larger hog production than was possible this year.

Corn-hog and other AAA officials already have held a series of regional conferences to consider possible changes in the program. In the next two months, they expect to look into the problems raised to see if changes can be made in a program without upsetting it.

Voting is compulsory in Argentina.
